WASHINGTON, June 10.—Time and time again Senator Dolliver and eight or nine others of the sto-called progressive Republicans went down to defeat to-day in their efforts to break the ranks of the Aldrich forces on the wool schedule of the tariff bill.

The lowa genator occupied the floor the greater part of the day, and offered numerous amendments looking to the reduction of the Finance Committee rates, but in each instance the amendments were voted down and the committee was sustained. The first of Mr. Dolliver's suggestions had for its object the confining to the wool in them of the duty on so-called yarns which are only part wool, and after considerable spirited discussion, in which as governed that the object of this provision was to prevent the importation of cheap cloths, but this statement was met by a suggestion from Mr. Dolliver that there might be some people who would be benefited by Senators Beveridge, Bristow.

Southern Veterans Crowd Around Stand and Fight to Grasp Hand of Northern General-Lee Statue at Vicksburg Will Be Unveiled To-Day.

M EMPHIS, TENN., June 10.—A frenzied demonstration of welcome by the men in Gray for the son of the man who led the Blue marked the final scene or the nineteenth reunion of the United Confederate Veterans to-day.

It took place during the parade, In the reviewing stand stood General Frederick D. Grant, of the United States Army. The first few divisions in line passed with only a limited number recognizing the son of the commander, who accomplished the surrender of Lee. But finally a cavalry division approached, and its leader, General Tyler, of Hickman, Ky., old and grizzled, peered steadily at General Grant a moment. Then he turned in his saddle and yelled:

"Come on, you kids, here's General Grant come to life again in his son."

Grant Deeply Touched.

jostled one another for an opportunity to grasp the hand of the son of their old-time enemy.

From that moment every gray-clad veteran who could reach the stand rushed up to shake hands with General Grant. The army officer's gray eyes filled with tears and his shoulders shook with emotion as he murmured, "God bless you all, boys, God bless you," glving each a cordial hand grasp.

Battletorn banners were grouped at Battletorn banners were grouped at his feet and waved over his head in salute. One old officer rode up to the stand, seized General Grant's hand and kissed him on the cheek, exclaiming: "God bless you, boy, I fought your father, of whom you are the limage, but he was a gallant, magnanimous foe, and I love his son."

Remarkable Ovation.

More than one veteran was in tears as he saw the famous Federal chieftain's son so touched by the reception. It is doubtful if any other Northern man, even a President, ever received such an ovation as that which was spontaneously given to General Grant by the Confederate veterans to-day. The parade over, the reunion was practically ended and special trains carrying veterans began to leave the city at 2 P. M. The ball of the sponsors, maids and matrons to-night was the one big social event of the gathering. It was opened by the famous Southern cross drill, and 1,000 couples participated in the dance, despite the suffocating heat.

Everywhere were flags, and the Stara and Bars of the Confederacy, the tattered battleflags of the States that chose Davis as President, the guidons of decimated batteries of artillery and the pennants that Forrest's splendid cavalrymen had often followed into battle, and sometimes to death, on the fleid.
